No, this is the best selfie ever!

Sorry, Ellen, we win this round!

IT'S MAYBE a bit weird that this year's Oscars ceremony will be remembered mostly for a selfie. But fair play to host Ellen DeGeneres for facilitating the most shared picture of all time. Ever. Until now, possibly. As we marshalled our pretty-nosed lady army of Nuts women to reproduce that now famous snap, in our theatre upstairs. With almost entirely no clothing. And, we're sure you'll agree, swapping boring Hollywood types for attractive womenfolk is a far better use of any smartphone's camera!

GENEVA AUTO SHOW!

2014's coolest new cars!

What'll be turning up on the Top Gear track in the next year or so!

➔ EVERY SPRING brings the Geneva Auto Show, where the biggest names in driving do their best to flog new motors. And the best thing? The Stig might be here, and we'd never know. Here's our pick from the show floor.

KOENIGSEGG ONE:1

The self-proclaimed world's first "Megacar" – its 1,341bhp is one megawatt of power. Top speed has been reported as a barely understandable 273mph, making it the fastest production car ever. 0-248mph in 20 seconds dead.

POWER: 1,322bhp 0-62: 2.5 secs TOP SPEED: 273mph WALLET DAMAGE: £1.5m

"And the bonnet is electrified to repel the French..."

Car had been yawning its head off all afternoon

ROLLS ROYCE GHOST II

Rolls Royce's new Ghost now has LED eyes, revised bumpers and bonnet and new paint and wheel options. Most importantly, you're now able to spec the Spirit of Ecstasy bonnet mascot lady to illuminate. Impressive.

POWER: 563bhp 0-62: 4.7 secs TOP SPEED: 155mph WALLET DAMAGE: £195k

AUDI TT QUATTRO SPORT

Proportions are similar to the previous model, but this TT is sleeker and more aggressive, with frowning LED headlights. It's 50kg lighter, too 50kg, achieved by aluminium bonnet, wings, roof, doors and tailgate.

POWER: 306bhp 0-62: 4.7 secs TOP SPEED: 155mph WALLET DAMAGE: £36k

"Is my toupée a bit obvious?"

641BHP BEAST!

MCLAREN 650S SPIDER

An "inbetweeny" that bridges the gap between McLaren's £175k MP4-12C and £860k P1, the name suggests its power, although that's in new-fangled PS – it's actually 641bhp. New to Geneva was this topless Spider version.

POWER: 641bhp 0-62: 3.0 secs TOP SPEED: 207mph WALLET DAMAGE: £215k

MASERATI ALFIERI CONCEPT

A nod to what the next-gen GranTurismo will look like. The heavily raked rear window, coupé roofline and curvy hips are a blatant borrow from Jaguar's F coupé. Blue detailing highlights on the wheels pay homage to the vintage wire rims of old.

POWER: 460bhp, 0-62: 4.4 secs TOP SPEED: 190mph WALLET DAMAGE: £115k

GUMPERT EXPLOSION

The German hypercar pedlars are back from the brink with a radical-looking 420bhp, 4WD, two-door coupé. The Explosion wears a carbon-fibre reinforced plastic bodyshell over a tubular frame chassis.

POWER: 420bhp 0-62: 3.0 secs TOP SPEED: 165mph WALLET DAMAGE: £86k

ASTON MARTIN V8 VANTAGE N430

N stands for the Nürburgring, 430 stands for the grunt in bhp and the car differs from usual V8 Astons with Kevlar bucket seats, forged alloy wheels, and a green and yellow paint job after the legendary DBR1 race car.

POWER: 430bhp 0-62: 4.8 secs TOP SPEED: 190mph WALLET DAMAGE: £115k

CIVIC TYPE-R

Honda's first turbocharged R version is a 2.0-litre with direct injection firing out artillery nudging the 300bhp mark. Crazy high rpm is promised, as per previous V-Tec motors. Welcome back to the land of hot hatchery.

POWER: 290bhp 0-62: 5.5 secs TOP SPEED: 150mph WALLET DAMAGE: £28k

FERRARI CALIFORNIA T

Born to cruise Beverly Hills as much as charge around Silverstone, the new California sees some styling tweaks, and is now a mere 10bhp, 2.0mph and 0.2 secs (0-62) behind its 458 Italia cousin. T stands for two turbos.

POWER: 552bhp 0-62: 3.6 secs TOP SPEED: 196mph WALLET DAMAGE: £153k

It was an odd time
for car to practise
its gurning

LAMBORGHINI HURACAN

The decade old Gallardo exits stage right. Replacing it is the 4WD, V10, 602bhp Huracan clothed in carbon-fibre and lightweight aluminium. Lambo says its new baby is 50 per cent stiffer and offers a 9.9 second blast to 124mph. Sold!

POWER: 602bhp 0-62: 3.2 secs TOP SPEED: 200mph+ WALLET DAMAGE: £188k

0-62 IN 3.2 SECS!

"I may be short,
but I can still
attract the ladies!"

ERMINI SEIOTTOSEI

Classic race brand makes a comeback with a two-seat tube steel-framed road-race car equipped with pushrod suspension, sequential gearbox and a Renault-sourced 315bhp engine. It only weighs 686kg in total. Amazing.

POWER: 315bhp 0-62: 3.5 secs TOP SPEED: 168mph WALLET DAMAGE: £80k

One knock-knock joke and car was in hysterics

HYUNDAI PASSOCORTO CONCEPT

This two-seater concept was designed in Turin by 16 students. A concept it may be, but South Korean giant Hyundai is a company to move quickly into production if enough people want this to become reality.

POWER: 266bhp 0-62: 5.0 secs TOP SPEED: TBC WALLET DAMAGE: Concept

Snake takes croc!

Epic battle ends in very full snake!

THIS IS the tail end of an epic five-hour tussle between two reptiles at Lake Moondarra in Queensland, Australia.

We don't know what started the beef, but the three-metre python ended it, asphyxiating the croc, then spending all afternoon swallowing its scaly dinner. If snakes used Instagram, it'd be the best "what I had for lunch" snap ever!

The python gets on top in the five-hour battle with the croc

The snake constricts the unlucky croc

A kinetic skull enables the snake to swallow the croc

The process of swallowing the crocodile took hours

The python tucks into the crocodile's tail

The meal will keep the python full for two months

An expert explains!

We spoke to London Zoo's deputy head of herpetology, Iri Gill

Hi Iri! Do pythons often take crocs?

There are a few species that have been known to take crocodilians but not this particular species combination.

Surely this is quite a risky prey to take on?

Um... yeah! But reptiles are opportunistic, and one presented itself.

Talk us through the eating process...

They have a kinetic skull made up of plates with connective tissue that stretches over food and moves. The bottom jaw is split in three places and stretches with the skull.

So does the prey stay where it is and the snake move over it?

Pretty much. Obviously, they haven't got hands and feet to shovel it in. Also, the teeth are recurrent backwards, so it'll only go one way.

Are they vulnerable during this process?

Yes, very – while eating as well as afterwards.

How long will it take to digest that meal?

A few weeks. It won't do anything except digest it.

Will it then do a big poo?

If it goes in one end, it comes out the other. But it will digest everything. It won't need to eat again for a couple of months.

EXCLUSIVE!

Watch_Dogs played!

We stab buttons, move thumb pads, play game!

➔ ANNOUNCED
AT games expo E3 back in 2012, it feels like we've been waiting for Watch_Dogs for longer than an Arsenal trophy. So in order to keep excitement levels at Defcon three, publisher Ubisoft flew our games chap to Montreal for an exclusive go on the game, where you use your phone to steal cars, scramble traffic lights, raise bridges and jam calls. It has a pretty dark storyline, pitting player against "the man" in a quest for vengeance, justice and cracking people over the bonce with night sticks. It's out on 27 May, all formats.

"Yay! Look at me!
Shooting my gun all
cool and horizontally!"

COOL BATTLES!

Players can use the game's "Focus" mechanic to slow action down to bullet-time, allowing them to easily draw a bead on moving targets. Combine this with Pearce's agility and gunfights look awesomely cool.

"Ooh, I got an Instagram like!"

Steampipe Hacked

LOSE THE FUZZ!

Players will be on the run from the cops a lot, so we recommend using high-speed hacks to deploy bollards or blow up steam pipes to send police cars into the air. We'd love to know what contract Pearce is on!

Helicopter Hacked

AN APP FOR THAT!

Hack your helicopter: Pearce's phone is a marvel of modern technology allowing him to open doors, steal cars, lift bank details off someone's phone and - oh yes - drop the odd helicopter to the pavement.

He went to great lengths to avoid the ticket inspector

"As the saying goes – always bring a stick to a gunfight... Oh"

PACKING PIECES!

Watch_Dogs has an arsenal of cool, customisable guns, a night stick for bopping enemies squarely about the head and a ton of makeshift gizmos that can distract, befuddle or blow up unsuspecting foes.

"That's my Tinder date? You have to be kidding!"

MULTIPLAYER INCLUDED!

Players can invade each other's games and take on challenges such as hacking each other's phones or evading each other for a set time. Online games are invite-only so you don't need to worry about other hackers trolling you!

The News Of The World claimed another victim

TROLL A CHUM!

You have the option of hacking directly into your chum's game and trolling them, but they have to agree to it first. If they let you into their game, however, you've been given licence to make their lives hell.

A quick word with Keith Lemon

The Celebrity Juice host on Superman and sideburns!

➔ Hi Keith! Celebrity Juice is back this week. What's new?

We were filming yesterday, I said, "I'm doing t'interview for Nuts tomorrow. What am I going to say if they ask what's new? I haven't got a fking clue. Everyone asks me, "When's One Direction on? When's Jessie J on?" I rarely know until I turn up. They've told me Pixie Lott, Paloma Faith and James Arthur, but he's always t*ts up and says things he shouldn't, so he's probably not allowed on.

Do you shave off your 'tache between series so nobody recognises you?

Erm, no. I grow a beard. I left it over Christmas until I looked like a tramp, then I shaved it off and had wicked sideburns and a 'tache. But the other day, in a meeting, they said, "You might have to lose your sideburns," because I'm doing a pilot for a new show where I play other people and they said, "We can't have everyone with sideburns."

What else can you tell us about your new show?

I wanted to call it Keith Lemon's Chocolate Starfish but I don't think they'll let me. At the moment, we just call it The Sketch Show. It's new characters and me playing different celebrities. I keep saying it's Bo' Selecta! 2 but it's not masks, it's prosthetics. The other day, I had to go and have a head cast so they can make noses and whatever to stick to my face.

This year's Saturday Night Takeaway Celebrity Juice Special was seen by over three million viewers. Why not make this series pay-per-view?

You know me, man. You know I don't do fk all. I turn up, I get drunk, I go on stage, I get drunker, then next day someone texts me the ratings and I go, "Nice one. Who's going t'pub?"

How do you think your "hat off" with Pharrell Williams went down at the Brits?

I wear hats as a disguise. You can disguise yourself well with a Pharrell hat by pulling it down right over your head and cutting two holes for eyes. I just thought, "I hope he's got his hat on." He came up and did the OK sign as if to say, "You look good." Then, while Corden was chatting about it, Alesha Dixon went, "Go on up there, now." I thought, I won't speak or everyone will think, "Attention-seeking ct!" So I ran up, kissed Pharrell and Corden, and sat back down.

You're being tipped to take over from James Corden as host of the Brits...

I can't imagine they'd ask me because they'd be too sh*t

"Morning! I'm your new neighbour!"

"They should get Emma Willis to present the Brits so I can fk it up for her!"
Keith Lemon

scared I'd say something I shouldn't. They should get someone to do it straight, like Emma Willis, and I can try to fk it up for them.

You're soon to be advertising alcopop Hooch. Did they send you a crate to road test?

They did. My mate came round who's German. I said, "What do you think of this drink?" He went, [does German accent] "I'm just looking at it and I'm thinking your face should be on this bottle." He tasted it and went, "Oh my god, it tastes exactly how you look. You should buy the company." I went, "I don't want to buy a drinks company. I'm on telly, you pr*ck!" I'll sell your product, but I don't want to run your fking company!

Is any ITV show safe from you popping up to ruin it?

I did This Morning for a year. I've got a daytime button and a night-time button. If I can judge the room and go, "Yeah, they're not offended by the word 'ct', then I'll say 'ct'." But if I think, "They're going to get wound up if I say 'ct', I won't say, 'ct'." Do you know what I mean? I'm not a mentalist!

● Celebrity Juice returns to ITV2 on Thursday 13 March, 10pm

CELEBRITY JUICED!

To date, Keith, Holly and Fearn have racked up 124 episodes of their award-winning show.

“If we lose contact,
I’ll fill by doing my Dermot dance!”
Dermot O’Leary

A quick word with Dermot O’Leary!

The X Factor host on aliens, gravity and Channel 4’s Live From Space!

➔ Hi Dermot! Tell us about Channel 4’s Space Season...

There’s Astronauts: Living In Space, which is their day-to-day rigmarole, but stuff we’d find fascinating. We have Houston: We Have A Problem, which is the stuff that can go wrong, like an Italian astronaut who nearly drowned in his spacesuit. Then we go Live From Space for two-and-a-half hours where we hook up with two astronauts on the International Space Station to do a live lap of the planet.

Cool. Do you now know loads about space?

I learnt a lot about the ISS [International Space Station]. It’s the most expensive thing that mankind has ever built at $150bn [£90bn]. It travels at 17,500mph, seven times faster than a speeding bullet. And it laps the world every 90 minutes. Weirdly, it’s only 250 miles above the Earth, so it’s closer than London to Glasgow.

Did you learn any secrets from NASA, like they’ve been housing aliens for years?

Er, no. Obviously, when you work with an agency like that you think they’re going to have a lot of secrets. But they’ve welcomed us with open arms.

In what ways is presenting a show live from space different from presenting The X Factor?
Well, it’s no different. X Factor is a big party on the weekend, but this is just as exciting.

I expect I’ll still be doing my trademark baseball swing.

What if space debris hits the ISS, like in Gravity?

There are 6,000 tonnes of space junk in orbit. They move the space station to avoid it. It’s one guy’s job at NASA to sit there and go, “That’s not too close... sh*t, that’s close, we’d better move it.” One time, something slipped through the net and all the astronauts had to get into the rocket, just in case. Hopefully, that won’t happen during our show.

If you lose the live feed during transmission, can you fill for two-and-a-half hours?

We will lose contact. Every orbit, NASA loses signal for about five minutes. I’m not that nervous. I could always do the Dermot dance!

Would you have preferred to go up in space rather than presenting from the ground?
I wouldn’t have turned them down! The Russians can take you up for $40m. You get eight days up on the space station. Two people have done it. I wonder what they wrote on Trip Advisor? “Rubbish. I had a terrible time. Only one toilet and one window, but a hell of a view. Two stars.” Ha!

What’s the most surprising thing you’ve learnt?

I always thought, “You’re up in space, it’s zero gravity.” That’s wrong. They have about 90 per cent gravity up there. The reason they’re floating is because the space station is permanently free-falling at 17,500mph.

Thanks, Dermot. Finally, why don’t they do the next series of The X Factor in space?

I’m not going to answer that!

But if you're Phillip Neil, a 35-year-old import worker from Shoeburyness, Essex, they can be the start of all manner of painful woes, not to mention a missing heel.

"It started as an ulcer on my heel," Phillip explains, "which caused skin to peel away in that area for a good few weeks. But it quickly got infected, so when I went to the wound management ward at Southend Hospital, they took me down for surgery and decided to take a chunk out and leave it open, which is what you can see here."

"In the end, I've had to have ten weeks in a cast and then a surgical boot, but I managed to break my ankle in it. When they took me into surgery – again – they drilled my heel bone to promote healing."

Brunette meets blonde!

INDIA & HOLLY

"I really want
to party with Rihanna!"
India

Hi India and Holly, how have you enjoyed shooting with each other?
India Reynolds:
It's been great.

Holly and I got to dress up in fantastic lingerie, and kiss and fondle each other a lot.

Holly Coleman: And then we ended up in the bath. I couldn't ask for a more fun way to spend the day than this!

What else have you been up to?

India: Me, Emma Glover, Rosie Jones and Holly Peers all went out in Reading the other week. I ended up behind the bar, serving, until the manager told me I had to stop giving free drinks away. All of us then went home for a huge sleepover.

Holly: Wow! I've been moving house and have new flatmate – Holly Eriksson. She's my favourite Swedish blonde in the world and it's going to be amazing us living together.

Settle the debate once and for all, then: who has more fun, blondes or brunettes?

India: Well, obviously, I'm going to go for brunettes. Brunettes can be way more naughty and I feel like I can get away with more than blondes. Maybe it's because I feel I can slip away and camouflage myself easier!

Holly: And, of course, I have to disagree! I've been brunette twice in my life but I've always gone back to being blonde. I just feel sexier that way.

What have you made of this year's awards season?

India: I watched Rihanna at the Grammys and I thought she was fantastic. I really want to party with that girl. And I love the fact that she basically has her boobs out pretty much the entire time – respect!

Holly: I watched some of the Brits and I loved Rudimental.

What did you make of Alex Turner's Brits speech?

Holly: I thought he was a bell-end really. And the whole "dropping the mic" thing didn't work at all, did it? I think ►

"I just feel sexier as a blonde!"

Holly

“Rosie can really hold her drink on a night out!”
India

the organisers must have known he was hammered so just turned the mic off, so it didn't even make a sound when it hit the floor. He's a prat.

Do you think that whole '50s quiff look works on a chap?

Holly: I love it – they call it the “chubby” look, don't they? I love that smart '50s suited look. I was driving through town on my way to the shoot today and ogling guys in cool retro suits on their lunch breaks. This is one of my main perving pleasures!

Which Nuts babes should win awards this year, and what for?

India: Well, Lucy Pinder should be winning Best Boobs awards for the rest of her life. They just get better with every year! And Emma Glover should win Best Bum. I'd give Rosie Jones the Best Mentalist award as that girl can really hold her drink on a night out.

Holly: Yep, I'm with India on all of that, though there should be an extra boob award for Holly Peers. Just the sheer size of her boobs amazes me every time I see them – they're epic!

Are you excited to be seeing the end of winter?

India: I can't wait for warmer weather. I need to break out of my winter clothes and start putting some tiny dresses on and going to outdoor parties.

Holly: And getting a natural tan! Plus I can wear colourful stuff again. In winter it feels like I'm always in black, dressed for a funeral. In summer I can wear more colours – and wear a lot less!

Thanks, ladies. Finally then, what's the most awesome thing on TV at the moment?

Holly: I love First Dates. I just can't believe some of the guys' chat-up lines. They're so cringey. It's hilarious.

India: I like that Inside Selfridges but I always end up watching Keeping Up With The Kardashians. I don't think they've shown anything else at my gym since I joined! ► they're epic!"

AARON PAUL

The Breaking Bad bloke
on his new movie and his love of British boozers!

Hi Aaron! It looks like you had a lot of fun putting pedal to metal. Are you a natural petrolhead?

Let's just say they made it very easy for me. The stunt driving coach, Rick Seaman, knows how to inspire novice drivers. But I could drive and always had that urge inside me to go fast. By the end of my first day of stunt driving school they had me doing 360s on a skid pattern, reverse 180s and all of that. I side-slammed some trash cans, put there to represent cameramen! So I had to learn to hit my marks and not kill the camera dude.

Were there any particularly hair-raising moments?

The most nerve-wracking bit was when I had to drive at the camera at over 80mph and drift the car into a 180 turn and stop within a couple of inches. I'm driving a dangerously fast Koenigsegg so I'm scared of hitting the cameraman [Scott Waugh], who's also our director, but he used to be a stuntman and told me not to worry, because if I clipped him he'd just roll over the hood of the car. He's used to it, but the thought of running him over didn't make me feel any better!

What's the most insane thing you do in Need For Speed?

Well, there's a grasshopper jump over three lanes of traffic and a cliff-top fall with the Mustang strapped to a chopper, but I didn't do those. We shot a whole sequence in Moab, Utah, where Julia [Imogen Poots] is driving us off a cliff while hooked onto a helicopter. It's the same cliff where they shot the ending to Thelma & Louise. It's a lot of fun, and keep a look out for some other cool Easter eggs in the film.

What was your first ever car?

I left Idaho for LA when I was 19 and made the road trip in a 1982 Toyota Corolla. It was faded gold – I loved that car so much.

We're guessing you drive something a bit posher now?

Ha! Well, right now the only car I have and need is a 1965 Shelby Cobra. Good memories, man... I got that car on a first date after I started hanging out with my future wife, Lauren.

So the cars you drive in Need For Speed look incredible, but are all replicas. Was that a bit of a let-down when you got inside them?

They were still incredibly fast! I was hitting top speeds of 125-130mph in the Koenigsegg. Those replicas were works of art. They took mouldings of the original cars and put them on a Ford chassis. They don't handle the same but man, can they move!

Was there any driving rivalry between you and co-star Dominic Cooper?

Nah, we were just having fun. But if you saw Top Gear last week, you'll know how I did in the time trial. [Aaron broke the lap record!]

What's the greatest cinema car chase of all time?

It has to be Steve McQueen's Bullitt – it has the ultimate car chase featuring the Mustang GT. It influences Need For Speed quite a bit too, and you'll see that we hit the streets of San Francisco.

Can Need For Speed take the car movie crown from Fast & Furious?

We had such a blast making this film that if they decide to do another one I'd jump on board. I'd love to come and shoot in the UK. Any time I have the opportunity to be here, I take it!

It's been months since the Breaking Bad finale, and we're still not completely over it. How are we supposed to fill the void?

Just re-watch it! But House Of Cards is so unbelievable and True Detective's great, too. So watch those, too.

Without any spoilers for those who still haven't seen Breaking Bad, what do you think Jesse would be up to at this very moment?

I'd like to think he's hiding out somewhere. Maybe in Alaska, making furniture.

We've seen some pretty funny YouTube vids of you doing adverts before Breaking Bad. Do they make you wince now?

Ha-ha! Oh my good God... I did a Juicy Fruit commercial back in the day and I played a guy with special powers who gets his pants torn off by a mad scientist. You're impressed, right?

What do you enjoy most about being in Blighty?

I like getting lost walking around London – it's so rich with history. One of my favourite things is this haunted pub crawl I stumbled upon. This guy takes you on a booze quest for donations. It's awesome!

Sounds amazing! Do you get recognised everywhere now?

Well, since Breaking Bad we have fans all over the world young and old, like nine-year-old kids who should not be watching – so shame on their parents! But then there was a 94-year-old grandma who was the oldest person ever to ask me to call them "bitch"! It's a weird world all right, but I love her for that.

Can you make our day and say it to the Nuts readers?

Yo, Nuts readers, thanks for watching, bitches! I love you!

JAMES ARTHUR VS FRANKIE BOYLE

No one likes a pop at an X Factor finalist more than Scottish shock-merchant Frankie Boyle, but being described as “looking like a cross between a tramp and a duck” was one Twitter jibe too far for 2012’s winner James Arthur. “Poor old man making yet more sh*t jokes about X Factor because he knows that’s the only way he can get attention any more #prat” fumed Arthur, before an unpleasant war of words ensued. Fast-forward a year, and the flagging singer was once again embroiled in a Twitter storm over making alleged homophobic remarks in a battle rap. And who was there to stick the boot in when he was down? Cue Frankie Boyle and a string of stinging put-downs, which eventually led to Arthur “quitting” Twitter.

Barton's no shrinking violet but, even by his gobby standards, his Twitter tirade against Gary Lineker and Alan Shearer was pretty rough. Shearer was called a “prick”, Lineker “an odious little toad” with “skeletons in his closet”. The two rap rascals got all hot and bothered a few years ago after Wiley used Twitter to describe the Pro as a poor man's Eminem. After Professor Green's retort that he would "st all over" the Roll Deep star, a heated exchange ensued and the two even suggested settling their beef in the real world. PIERS MORGAN VS THE WORLD

VS RIO FERDINAND 2012-2014

The pair first locked hashtags after Morgan taunted Ferdinand for being dropped from the England squad in 2012. Rio's response? "tues could be a bad day as Embarrassing Bodies are filming and @piersmorgan starring in episode about moobs." The more recent news that Morgan's chat show has been axed only ignited the feud once more. "Hearing ya show ratings are lower than a snake's belly?" Rio quipped last month!

WINNER: FERDINAND!

VS MICHAEL OWEN - 2013

Mischief-making Morgan is officially the beefiest tweeter on our list, having enjoyed more feuds than anyone else we've mentioned. His recent beef with Owen came about after the former Liverpool player criticised Arsenal's players in a personal blog. Gooner Morgan went mad, calling Owen a "benchwarmer" and instigating a lengthy Twitter argument. Hey Holly! Aside from the hair colour, what's new with you?

It's a quiet time of year for me 'cos everyone's still skint after Christmas. But it's March now, so things should be picking up again. Hopefully, we'll be doing another series of Geordie Shore.

When's it back on our screens?

We don't normally find out until a couple of weeks before the show starts. But there are rumours that we'll be filming within the next two months.

They've filmed you in Australia and Mexico, so where would you like to end up next?

Las Vegas would be crazy. I doubt they'd let us film in the casinos, but I reckon we could get around that. It would be like one of the Hangover films!

Couldn't they film you in space like Kate Upton?

That sounded incredible. Mind you, MTV always tell us they don't have a massive budget. We're lucky to get taken to nice places in Newcastle these days, let alone space. Maybe NASA could fund it? You never know.

Meanwhile, back on Earth, are you enjoying yourself today?

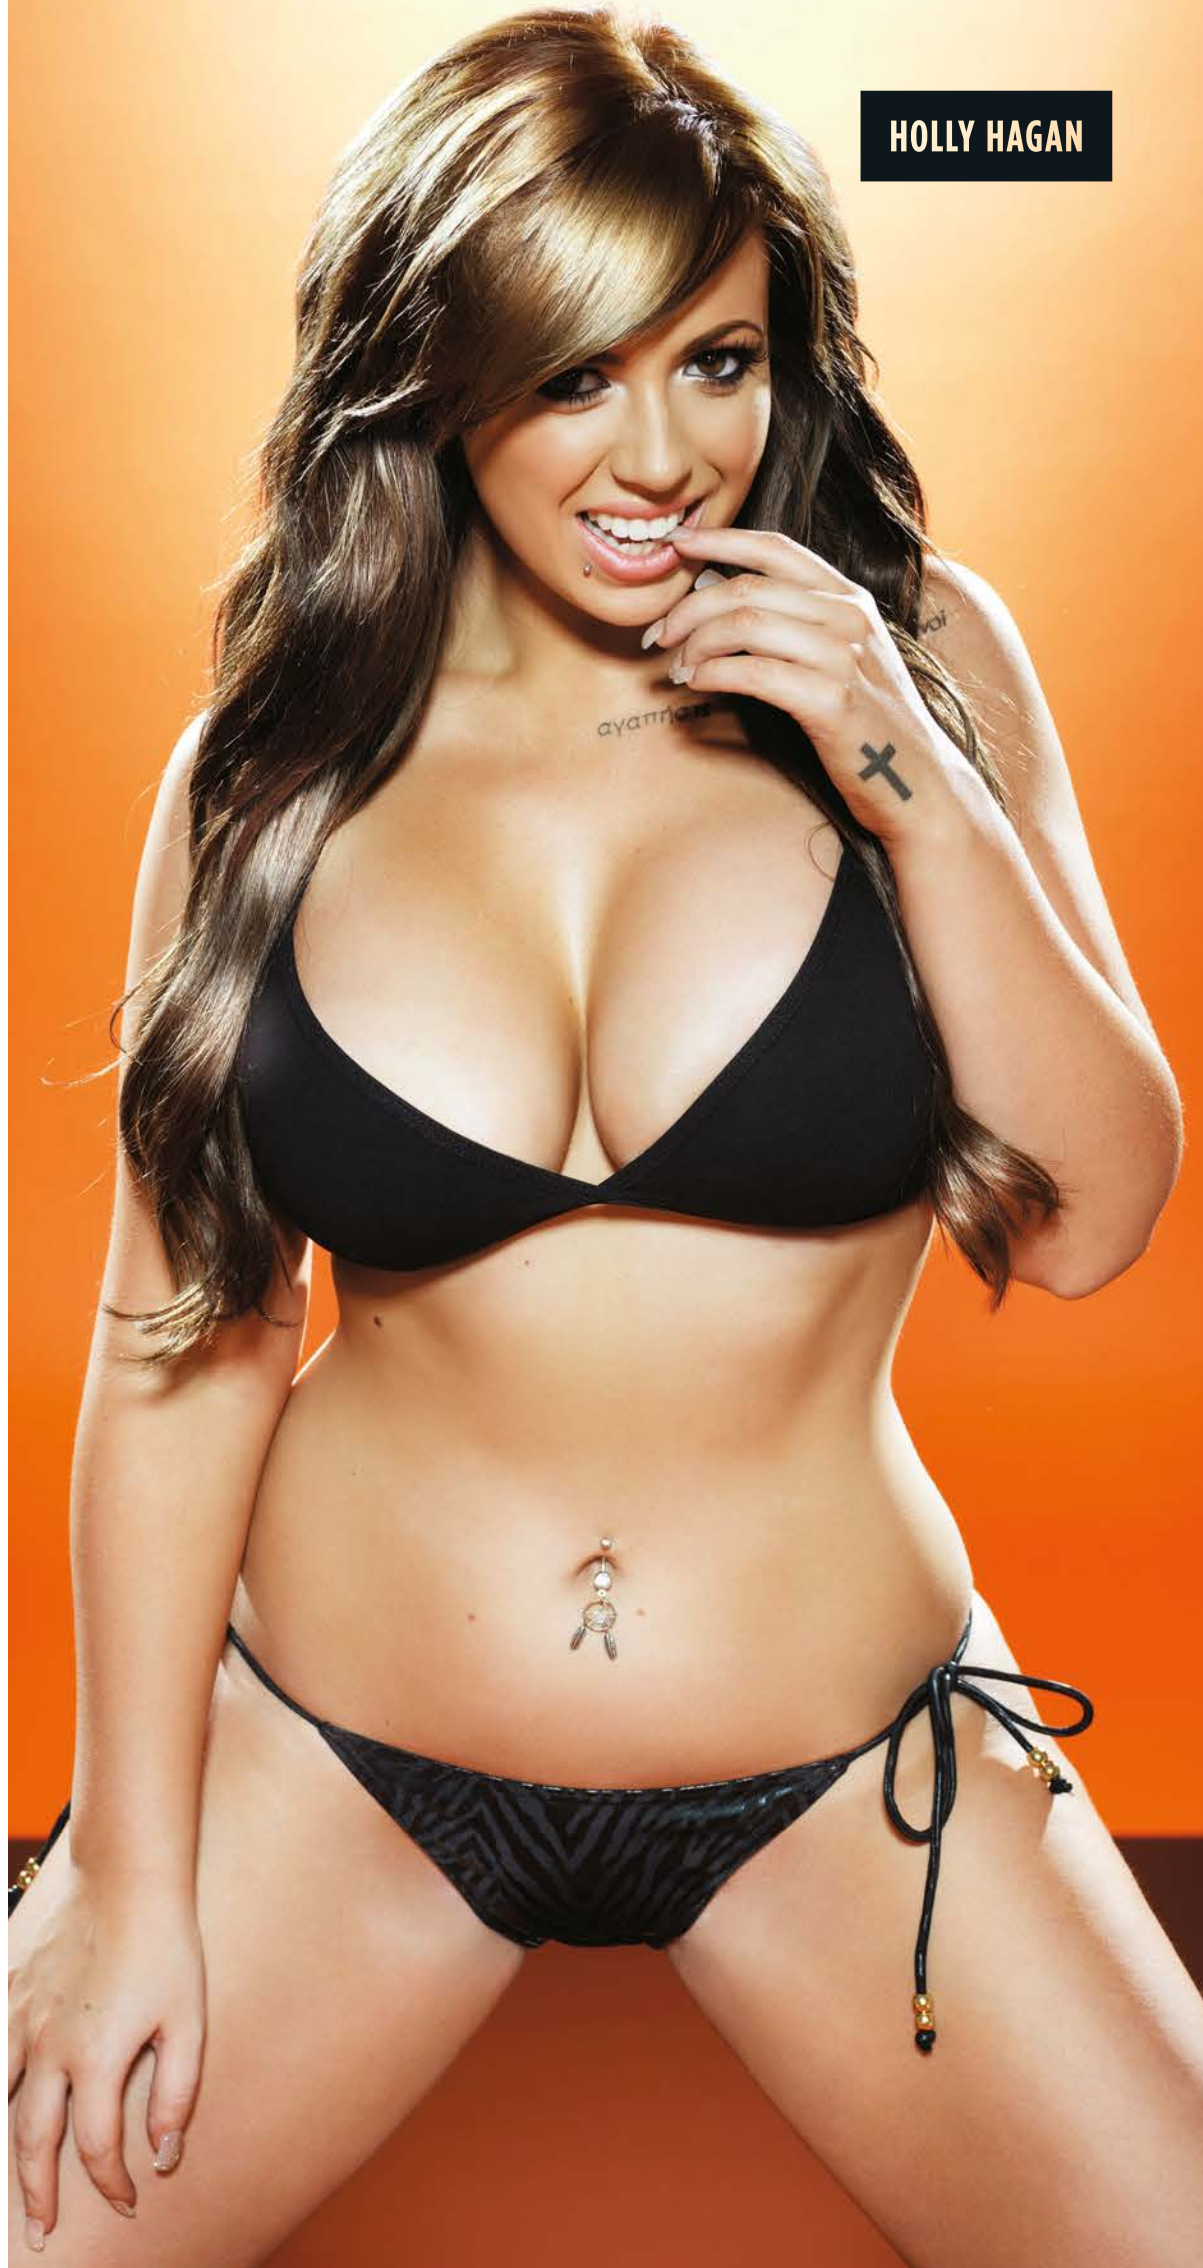

I love the retro theme. I loved the shoes so much, I'm stealing them from the stylist! I've been haggling over the price though, apparently, they're from Primark.

Enjoying being a brunette?

I get awesome compliments – I was worried people would think I look boring 'cos I'm used to having blue hair and stuff. I like it, it looks classy and I can hide from people a bit more. It's hard to avoid attention when you have stupid blue hair!

We see your thirst for selfies shows no signs of letting up...

I've quite a few to my name now, don't I? My favourite's one that I took after waking up on my birthday. It's just me in my bra and knickers. ►

us booty girls to get sexy stuff!”

A sexy black underwear set and nothing else. No one is ever seeing it online, though!

Your boobs seem bigger...

Is it hard to buy decent bras?

Definitely! It's hard for us booby girls to get sexy stuff. I haven't got a fella, so why fuss about it? Also, if I do bring a guy home he's not going to get upset and say, "Why haven't you got a nicer bra on?"

Does having big boobs get you ahead in life?

When I was younger and had no ID to get into clubs they were a big help. I remember one night we were too drunk to be allowed in, so my mates wrote a rude word across my boobs. The bouncers let me straight in after seeing that!

Have you been up to more mischief recently?

No! What you see on the show is only six weeks of my year, where I'm given loads to drink and parties to go to. They take the rudest things I ever do and cram them into one half-hour episode. The rest of the time, I'm very demure, you know!

What's the weirdest thing you've been asked on Twitter?

One guy keeps asking for my shoes! He's sent me a message every single day saying he'll buy a pair of my shoes for £900. Now, I'm seriously tempted but how will he send the money? Also, what's he going to do with them? It sounds a bit unsettling.

Would you ever do Celeb BB?

It'd be too hard. Charlotte did it last year, but me and her are so alike that it'd just look like I was copying her. People would be like, "She's copying Charlotte – she's just as stupid!" Also, I mean, she won – so how do I top that?

You do loads of these personal appearances in nightclubs. Do they ever feel a bit awkward?

I once had a big fight break out at one! Some guy wanted a picture with me but there were a few other people waiting ► in front of him and he refused to stand in line. Anyway, he got chucked out. I just thought, 'I ain't that special, mate!'

Nonsense! Do you hang out with all the Geordie Shore lot when you're not filming?

We have the odd booze up and are always chatting on WhatsApp. I don't drink when I'm not in the show – I'll probably have one night out in three months. People think I walk around with a bottle of vodka in my handbag. I don't!

If you had to vote somebody off the Geordie Shore house who would you pick?

That new girl! I can barely recall her name [We think she means Marnie – they had a punch-up – Ed]. She'd be gone.

Who's the sexiest babe on TV, in your opinion?

Rosie Huntington-Whiteley. She's done an advert or two. I like her big, sexy mouth and figure. I'd fancy her more if she was a bit curvier, though.

What kind of bloke are you looking to bag in 2014?

I don't care about massive muscles – the Geordie Shore boys do that for their own self-love. I like really cheeky boys. Honestly, I really like that – Adidas tracksuit, Nike Air Max trainers, the works. People say that's scruffy, but you could buy a whole smart outfit for the price of one pair of Air Max.

Do you reckon you could last a year without sex?

I went from July to the end of last year without having sex, so I deserve an award for that!

Thanks, Holly. Finally, can you tell us something that's been cut from Geordie Shore?

OK, we had a house party one night. It was rammed and the queue for the bathroom was ridiculous. Charlotte decides that she can't possibly wait, so gets a bowl from the kitchen and goes in that. In the middle of the house party and everyone knew. Ha! ►

This first series of this thriller – about two Soviet KGB officers posing as a normal couple in Cold War America – had the action, suspense and authenticity to go along with its cool premise, so we're excited for the second series, beginning here with a routine operation going awry. Matthew Rhys and Keri Russell star.

We can't make our minds up about this firefighting drama. On the one hand, the rescue scenes are suitably realistic and tense, but on the other, we find some of the dialogue a little bit corny and clichéd. It's undoubtedly entertaining though, so we're sticking with it. Tonight, Dennis's reckless behaviour angers Mal.

BBC FOUR/HD • 10pm

If you're in the market for a bit of gently daft comedy tonight, you could do worse than check out the second episode of the slightly under-the-radar sitcom from the brain of Graham Linehan (Father Ted, The IT Crowd). Bloody Homecoming

A high school reunion + a killer on the loose = an old skool horror flick!

BLOODY HOMECOMING

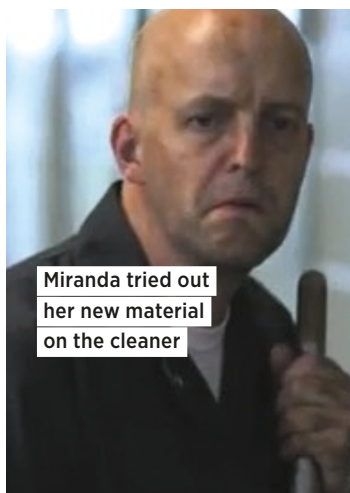

10 March • 18

We love a good
slasher movie
here at Nuts.

Hope that doesn't reflect too badly on our personalities. And if said movie happens to involve the participation of lithe, young females, then all the better.
Such a shame that the fit ones
always get offed first...

Bloody Homecoming tells of the various splattery misfortunes of a group of students who decide to revive the traditional homecoming dance, three years after one of their friends perished in a fire. As the evening unfolds, it becomes apparent that as well as homecoming, there's going to be plenty of headbanging, heartstabbing
and peoplekilling too...

A throwback to the days of classic "silent killer with sharp objects stalks young people"
films like The Burning and Silent Night, Deadly Night, Bloody Homecoming boasts some dandy eye candy in the forms of Lexi Giovagnoli, Randi Lamey and Victoria Park, among others. And if the creepy Janitor Fred seems familiar, that's because he's played by British stand-up Jim Tavaré...

Miranda tried out
her new material
on the cleaner

"My, what big...
eyes you have"

Verdict...

Here's what we think...

Nuts man Casey:

"With an entire dance full of teens and school staff to slaughter, this one was always going to deliver a good
body count!"

Nuts man Mark:

"It made me
want to put on a gas mask
and scare my girlfriend. Does that make me
a little odd?
What do you mean 'Yes?'"

Nuts man Rom:

"I spent the murder scenes
hiding behind the sofa. I told my mates I was looking for my
contact lenses
- I think I got away with it!"

VERDICT:

It's good and bloody, and the girls are pretty - that must mean it's pretty bloody good!

10 RUDE QUESTIONS!

And a real girl to answer them!

Abbie Sara

22 Preston

1 Where's the strangest place you've had sex?

"This one time, I got a bit carried away with a chap in a public library. We couldn't find anywhere quiet in town, so we got it on behind the non-fiction section. It's a good thing people use Kindles now, as the place was empty!"

2 What's your favourite position?

"You can't go wrong with the good old doggy style. Combine that with a gentle spank and some mutual hair pulling and I'm a happy Abbie."

3 Is it better to give or receive?

"That depends entirely on what it is and how the mood takes you... I love to give my chap a surprise on special occasions, but who doesn't?"

4 What one thing would you really like to try but haven't yet?

"There's not much I haven't tried already. I've had a threesome once, and I loved it, so why stop there? Maybe a foursome? More? Ha-ha!"

5 What's the rudest thing you've ever done?

"That's something too rude to say even in Nuts! But I've already told you about having a threesome. That's very rude!"

6 Ever got it on with another girl?

"Well, of course I have, because we're the pretty ones! Being rude with girls can be just as fun as with a bloke, if not even better and sexier."

7 What's your favourite sexy outfit?

"I have a few sexy numbers that get me in the mood, but I'm thinking of dyeing my hair a darker colour so I might invest in a Lara Croft outfit to go with it. That could be fun."

8 Have you ever made a sex tape?

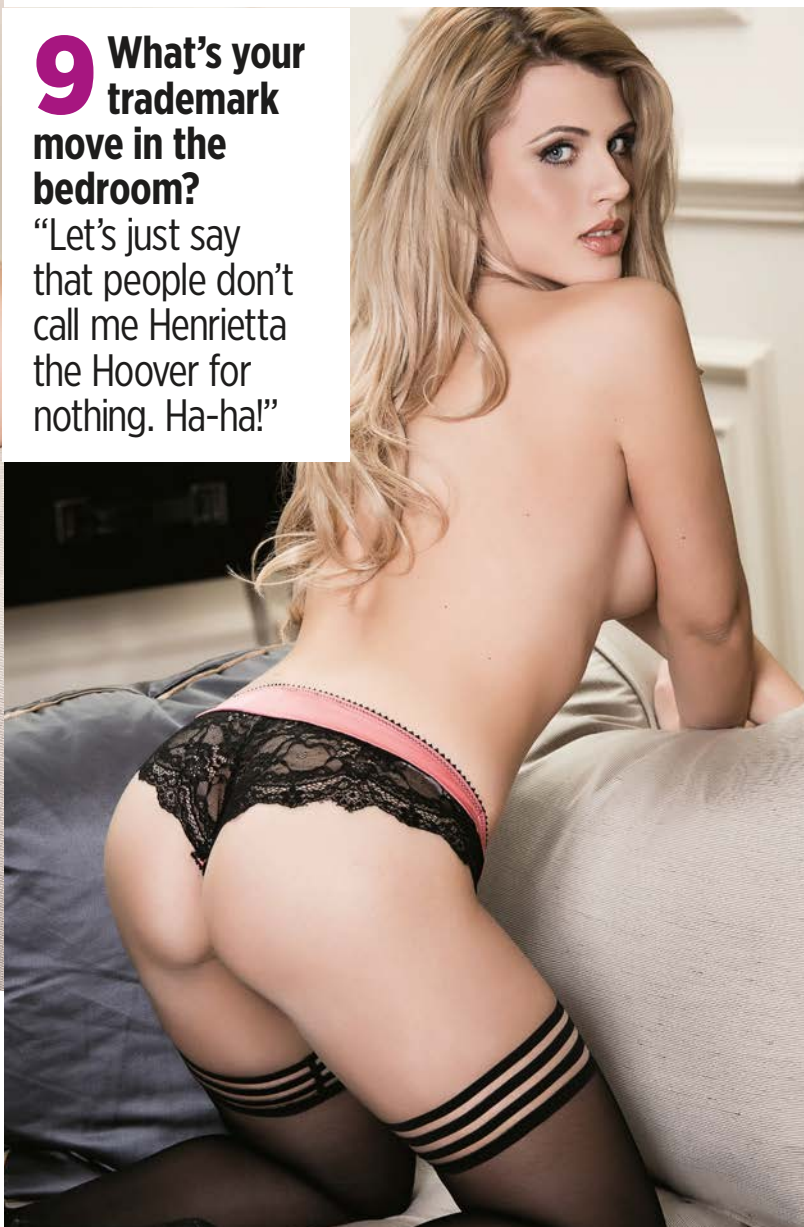

"Well, everyone has a video camera on their phone these days, don't they? That's all I'm going to say about that. You'll just have to let your imagination do the rest!"

9 What's your trademark move in the bedroom?

"Let's just say that people don't call me Henrietta the Hoover for nothing. Ha-ha!"

10 What really turns you on?

"I have a bit of a thing for beards. I just love the feeling of them against my skin. It's a massive turn-on."

Pays out to loads of winners every week!

➔ Join us at Nuts Games and play the Deal or No Deal slot for a chance to win one of the mega-jackpots!

Unlike most multi-line slots, with Deal or No Deal you pick your coin size (bet amount), before the game begins. This way, you can be sure you're playing for the right Progressive Jackpot.

The coin size options will appear before the game begins. Play for 5p, 10p or 20p per line. Simply click on your chosen coin size and the game will begin! Play up to 20 lines each spin by choosing "Bet Max". This gives you the highest chance of winning as you've covered more line combinations than if you choose a single line.

BANKER'S OFFER

If the ringing phone stops your reels from spinning, you're guaranteed a win. But the banker's going to try and test your nerve.

He'll make a cash offer in exchange for the amount you'd win on the reels – and he only makes an offer if he knows you've got a win. Choose Deal to accept his offer or No Deal to return to the reels and take your chances.

If you choose to accept the banker's offer you'll still see the result on the reels, just so you know how generous the banker was (or wasn't) being with his offer.

And finally, all that's left to do is get playing. Good luck!

CONFESSION OF THE WEEK!

'Saucy fun with the singer'

I WENT to a gig with some mates last month, and the singer looked amazing. Standing at the front, my low-cut top seemed to catch his eye. I followed him backstage afterwards, where he wrapped his arms around me, squeezing my boobs. We kissed for ages, and I placed one leg on a chair as he teased my clit like a guitar string. A knock on the door meant I only had time to quickly show my "appreciation" orally. So I made sure I went along to the next gig to finish what I'd started!

Kayleigh Nottingham

'A quickie in the pool'

MY BOYFRIEND and I just went on holiday to Mexico. As soon as we got to the hotel, we dumped our bags and went for a few drinks in the bar. After two of the barman's special cocktails, I was a little tipsy. I whispered to my fella that a big fantasy of mine was to have sex in a pool.

Hearing that, he grabbed me and insisted that we go for a dip. The pool was closing soon and most people were already going for their dinner. A few were walking past as he pulled my bikini bottoms to one side and slipped inside me. Within a minute, I could feel my orgasm building under the water. Suffice to say, it was the fastest – and wettest – climax I've ever had.

Mary Shropshire

'Getting hot in the garage'

MY MECHANIC boyfriend rang me up at college one day, telling me to come to his work after as he had some new tyres for my car. When I arrived, all the other lads had gone home. He told me to wait in the office while he fitted the parts, so I thought I'd give him a cheeky thrill. I undressed secretly and stepped out stark naked! He turned round to say something and stopped dead in his tracks. He pulled me close and a rush of pleasure went through my body. I unzipped his overalls and started to kiss him down below. He lifted me onto the bonnet, spread my legs and thrust inside me. It was our steamiest encounter yet and I'm looking forward to more!

Nuts HOOK-UPS CONFESSIONS!

"I'd been chatting to this guy via the Nuts Hook-ups service and we decided to meet in a pub near where we both lived. We spent a few hours flirting and even had a cheeky snog at the bar. He asked if I fancied going for a drive but, unfortunately, when we were right in the middle of nowhere, we skidded and got stuck. We had to call the rescue services. They took two hours to get to us and by then it was pitch black. Our battery had gone flat and we'd had to find some way to keep warm... By the time the AA bloke turned up, we were dishevelled and all the car windows had steamed over. A crazy first date, but I can't wait to see him again!"

F1 PREVIEW!

Coulthard: 'Lewis is the favourite!'

The former F1 ace on the brand new season!

➔ Hi David! What on earth is going on at Red Bull? Why are their cars testing so badly?

They're some way behind – several weeks, in fact – in their development of the powertrain system. It's not just affecting Red Bull, it's affecting all the Renault-powered cars. Mercedes have had more time in their development – they're not without their own problems, it's a huge engineering package to get these hybrid cars to run reliably. But Red Bull are behind the curve, and it's questionable whether more than half the field will even finish the first Grand Prix. But they have a good car package and as Renault and Red Bull work out the initial problems, they'll come on in leaps and bounds.

How have the cars changed?

They've put in a 1.6-litre turbocharged V6 engine, producing 600hp. They've adapted this to a capacity of up to 150 kilowatts of electrical recoverable energy – ERE – which is stored on board. That equates to just under 200hp available from the energy recovering system, so it's a huge part of overall performance. The EREs go down and you're losing nearly 200hp, unlike the old kinetic energy recovery system, where you lost about 80hp. So making a battery that can store that amount of energy on a lap-by-lap basis, and deploy that energy on a lap-by-lap basis, seamlessly, without overheating issues...

Can you explain that in layman's terms?

OK, when you charge a mobile phone, the battery gets hot. Imagine if you're charging your mobile over the course of a minute and a half to capacity – that's what this energy unit is doing. It depletes the battery in delivering its horsepower and then you charge the battery back up again over a lap, so there are huge heat exchange management issues.

What do you think of the innovation of giving double points in the final race?

It's been very good for F1 in terms of column inches!

Ultimately, it's the same for everyone. So, when you know that's the case ahead of the season, you just get on and do what you have to do in every individual race. It could mean the difference between winning the Championship and not. That race, in itself, is not twice as valuable as any other, but in a sense it now is.

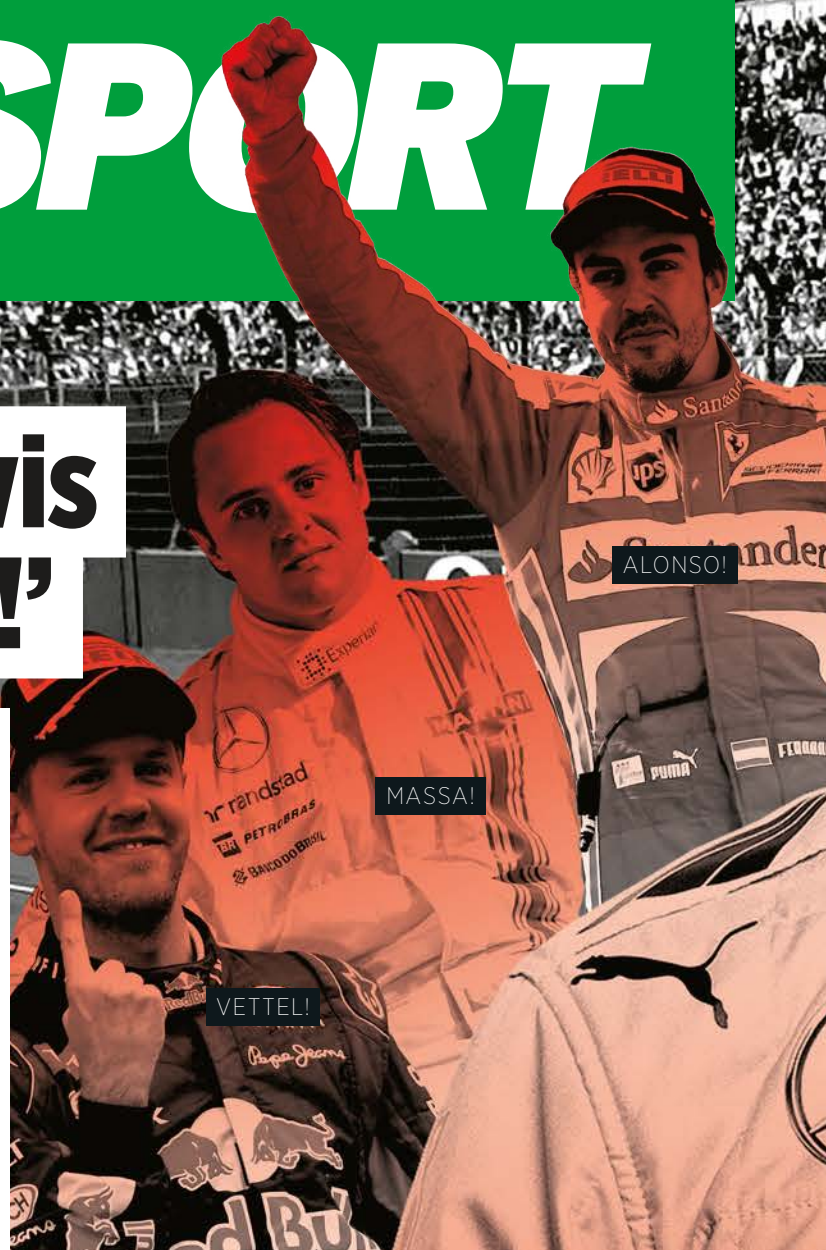

Won't the scramble for those extra points make the race particularly dangerous?

I understand the thought process but the reality is that these guys find the first race harder when they go into it race-rusty. The first corner is an instinctive run and you make decisions based on gut feeling, which comes back over time. So no, I don't think the points on offer in the last race make it more dangerous. F1 is like poker – if you play silly odds, you'll lose, and no racing driver wants to do that.

How do you go about beating Sebastian Vettel?

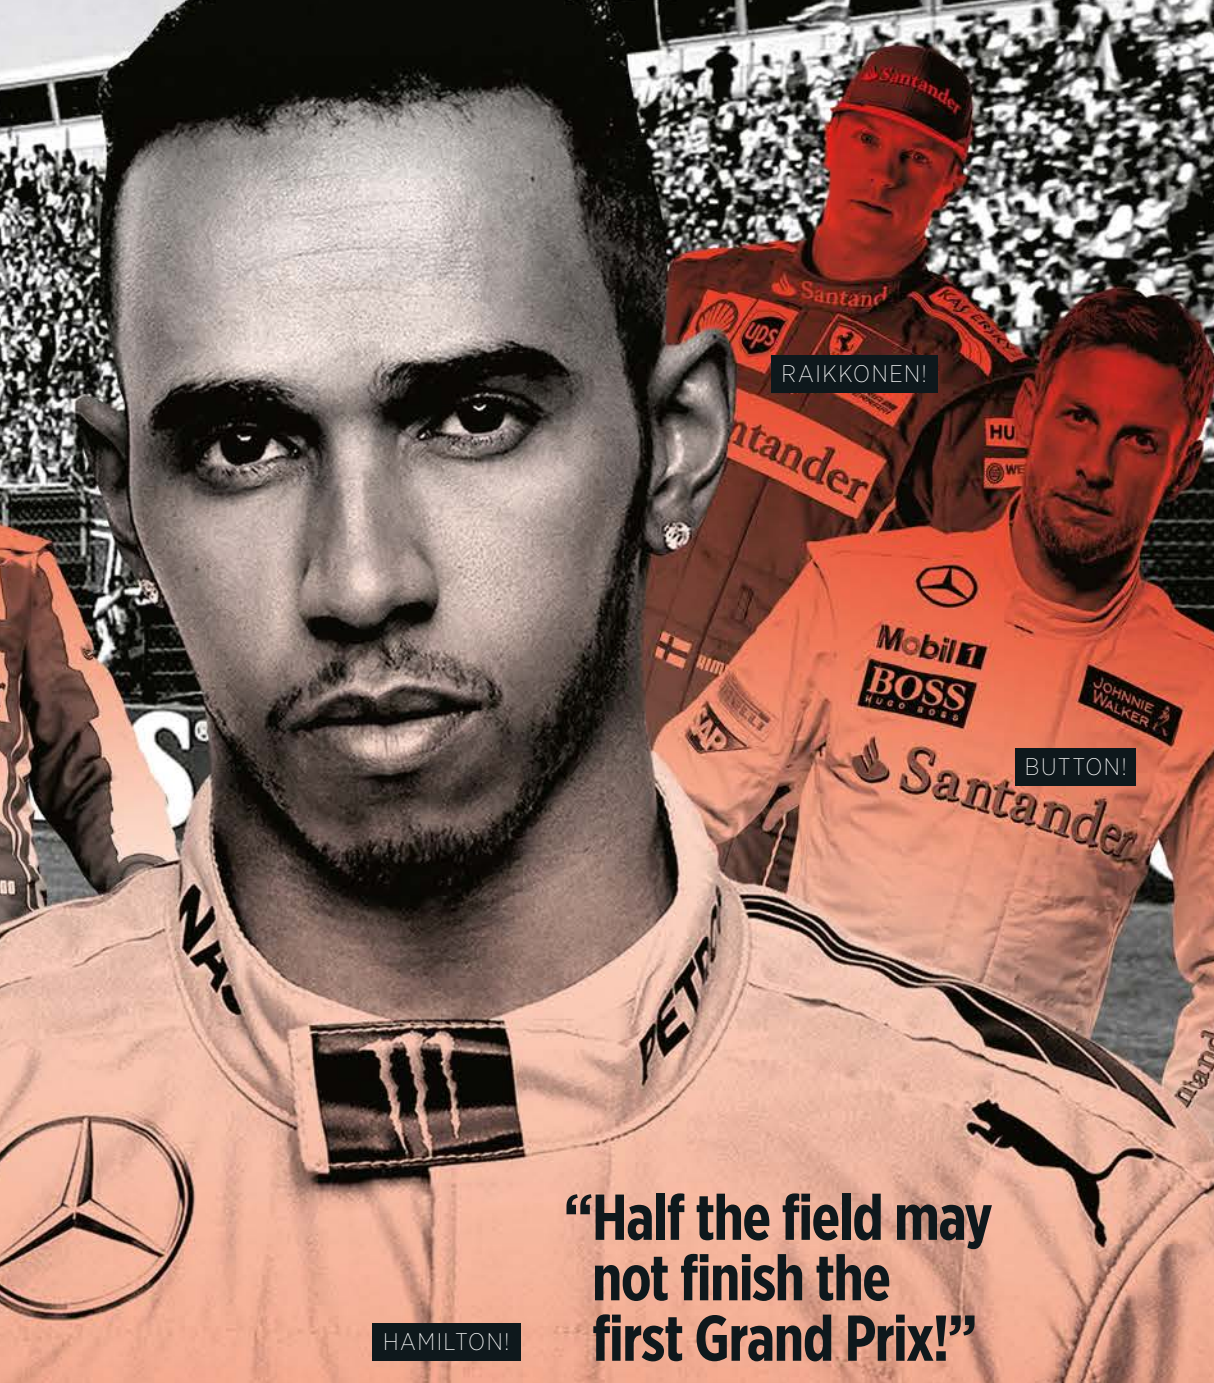

Simply by putting him out of the game in terms of car performance. He has been driving one of the best cars, maybe even the best car, over the last four years and has done an exceptional job. He has been able to take the rules and regulations and really exploit them. But if Red Bull don't develop their powertrain package and he can't finish races then he's effectively out of the Championship.

A WINNING FORMULA!

Ex-Williams, McLaren and Red Bull driver David won 13 races in his Formula One career.

RAIKKONEN!

BUTTON!

HAMILTON!

“Half the field may not finish the first Grand Prix!”

How do you rate the British drivers this season?

Very good. I think Lewis Hamilton has to be one of the favourites. Jenson is a quality driver and McLaren seem to have a good package for him to work with, but on what we've seen so far, Lewis has to be the favourite overall.

To win the whole thing?

Absolutely. He's an exceptional driver. As are Alonso, Vettel, Raikkonen, Button. The rest are simply very good drivers. There are no bad drivers, but Lewis is exceptional in terms of speed and commitment. It may seem a while since he won a title but that's as much down to the machinery as it is to him.

Who are your dark horses?

It's impossible to see beyond the big four teams – McLaren, Mercedes, Ferrari and Red Bull. But Williams could be a surprise package with Massa and Valtteri Bottas at the start of the season because their power unit seems to be working well. They and Force India – all the Mercedes-powered cars – got in plenty of pre-season laps.

Are you secretly pleased by Red Bull's apparent problems?

No, as I admire success. When I was being beaten by Michael Schumacher, I was never jealous because that never gets you anywhere. I'd never encourage anyone to enjoy someone going through a tough period. If you enjoy that, the chances are one day people will be laughing at you.

Have you ever seen Kimi Raikkonen display the vaguest hint of human emotion?

I have! I was team-mates with him and I can reveal that when he has a few drinks, he becomes extremely talkative. But at the track, none of us are there to shoot the breeze.

Thanks, David! Finally, which F1 driver would you most like to go out on the lash with?

Ha ha! Jenson, obviously.

● The Australian Grand Prix is live on Radio 5 Live and Sky Sports F1/HD from 6am, Sunday 16 March.

The weird noses explained!

BBC 5 Live F1 pundit Allan McNish explains the new-look nose cones!

“The regulations about noses have changed because they were very high. It was felt that if there was a side impact, like the one that happened at Spa at the first corner in 2012, then there was a possibility of the result being pretty dangerous. And so they thought they'd lower the nose by about ten centimetres.

“The designers came up with some interesting ideas on how to build a racing nose that we haven't seen before. The Ferrari nose looks like a Hoover. There have been a lot of ingenious ideas relating to how you get around the regulations – the twin-tusk of Lotus, for example, looks interesting.

“Since this regulation was set down by the FIA, I think the designs will improve through the year and will eventually look better. But it's about performance and whether that nose can provide more grip and downforce, better air-flow – that's what the designers are interested in. The ugliest car in the world can also be the most beautiful thing in the world, I've found.”

EXCLUSIVE!

Man United vs Liverpool: The heat is on!

Why the upcoming grudge match could be the most brutal one yet!

WHEN MAN
United welcome
Liverpool into their fortress, you know sparks are going to fly, cards are going to be brandished and tempers are going to fray. But this season's fixture has higher stakes than ever, with United faltering as Liverpool chase the title. MOTD footy genius Jonathan Pearce considers some of the fascinating sub-plots behind one of football's most bitter rivalries...

● Man United vs
Liverpool, 16 March, Sky
Sports 1/HD 1.30pm.

THE EX-EVERTON GAFFER!

"From his celebrations at the end of United's Capital One Cup triumph over Liverpool in September, you could see what victory over his old Merseyside rivals means to the beleaguered United boss. He's only beaten them five times in 27 attempts. Both clubs will try to play that down. But it's bound to add spice to the day. Moyes inherited a team in decline, but a home defeat that could help Liverpool towards a title tilt and KO United's Champions League hopes would have the home fans howling for blood."

LIVERPOOL'S YEAR?

"Liverpool are genuine title contenders now. Their football was of the highest quality at home to Everton and Arsenal, and at Southampton in recent weeks. The League's top scorers are playing with freedom and flair. The front two can terrify any defence. But it's games like this that will test their durability. If Swansea and Fulham can expose defensive weaknesses then so can United – but if Liverpool win this, the title can genuinely be theirs."

THE NEED FOR EUROPE!

"A United defeat would slam the door on Champions League football next season, although they could still creep into the Europa League – if they want it. That's a big comedown for a mighty club. Budgets will have to be adjusted. But the size of the club, its tradition and the money they can pay will still attract top players. One season out of Europe's elite competition will be damaging, but not crippling."

MAN WITH THE MIC!

Jonathan's first
commentary
was a League
Cup game
between Bristol
Rovers and Exeter City!

ENEMIES IN THE STANDS!

"Ryan Giggs once described this as the 'most famous fixture' in English football. For generations this match has been an intense stew of passion and bile. Great goals, red cards – Vidic alone has three to his name. Gary Neville ranting – it's had it all. United 20 titles! Liverpool 18! The fans are acutely aware of the history and that this season could be a swing of the pendulum back towards the Mersey."

ROONEY: ALWAYS A BLUE!

"It's nearly ten years since Wayne Rooney left Everton but if anything, his hatred of Liverpool has intensified. Each of his four goals against them in a United shirt has been a jewel for the Croxteth boy. He'll be fired up for this and though the Liverpool defence was rock-solid at Southampton, he'll have spotted flaws in previous weeks. Rooney can get around the centre-backs to create real problems. He's been United's star this season. If he and Van Persie can stay fit, United can still finish the season strongly – starting with the old foe."

SUAREZ & EVRA, TOGETHER AGAIN!

"It's two seasons since Luiz Suarez was banned for eight games for racially abusing Patrice Evra – an accusation he has always denied. The feud festered when the Uruguayan refused to shake hands with the Frenchman at Old Trafford on his return. But it won't be an extra motivation for the Liverpool striker. He's up for every game. His work-rate is prodigious. United must come up with a plan to stop him. His 27 goals in 24 games this season is a world-class strike rate. But the first time he and Evra come together, or the first time Suarez goes to ground, will fan the flames of bitter enmity in the stands. All it needs is someone to light the touch paper then it'll all kick off. Don't take your eyes off them!"

JP's overall verdict:

"It matters so much to both clubs. Neither defence is secure. I'll take United to score from a set piece but Liverpool to fly back. Suarez and Sturridge will terrify the home defence. The visitors to level and lead, then Rooney to level theatrically late on." JP'S PREDICTION: "2-2 for me – but red cards would change everything!"

Pardew's moment of madness!

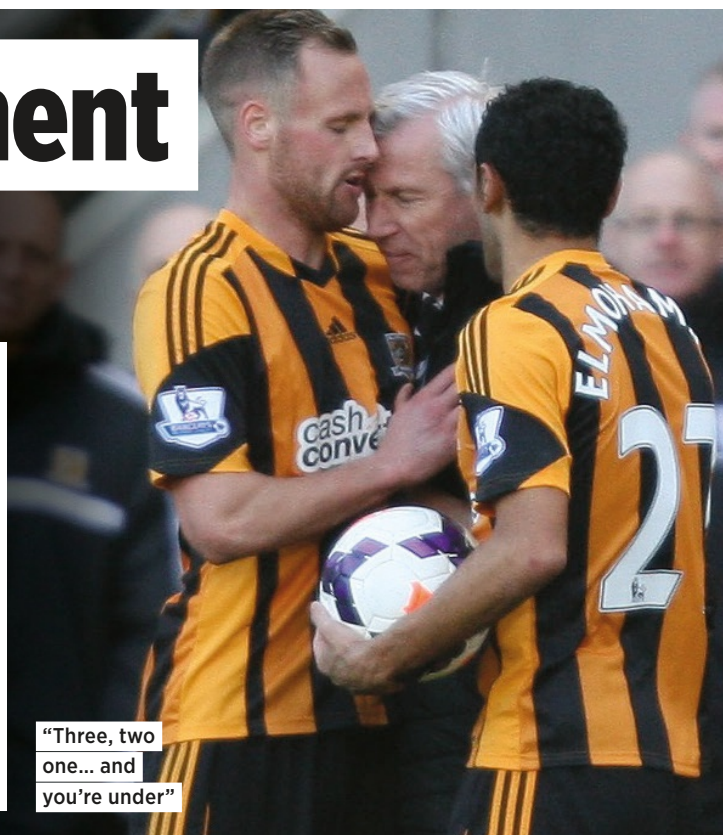

I'd have been too busy enjoying the result!

➔ THERE'S NOT much you can say about Alan Pardew that hasn't been said already, but now the dust has settled, we can maybe get a bit of perspective.

He got carried away, and that's unacceptable, but to his credit, he acknowledged that he was in the wrong and took a hefty hit to the pocket. Which is something the FA will acknowledge when they come to censure him but a touchline ban is inevitable, maybe a stadium ban. Alan will just have to take what he's given.

What puzzles me most is that he was winning away against a decent Hull side – I'd have been in the dug-out preparing to crack out the cigars! It'd be a shame if this derails Newcastle's chances of finishing in the European places in the league.

Sol's wrong to play race card!

I'M SORRY, but I don't believe Sol Campbell is right to claim he was denied the England captaincy on grounds of race, as he has done in his book.

I was once up for club captaincy and suspected I wouldn't get the nod, not because of my skin colour but because the other fella was the better option. Terry Venables, who made Sol England captain a few times, will be aghast.

Sensationalist statements like this sell books. I'm not sure he actually believes it.

Well, that told England nothing!

ENGLAND DIDN'T learn much in their game against Denmark. Everyone hoped they'd put on a performance – instead, they just got negativity. But they ground out a win in the kind of game that doesn't serve any great purpose.

The Sturridge/Rooney partnership didn't show the understanding that Sturridge and Suarez have – Roy needs to play them in the positions that Sturridge and Suarez play in. Steven Gerrard looks good in the holding role, Joe Hart did OK, but ultimately, not a game that was much use to us.
